destination of arms, but a nation could not do that, because its honor and its character among nations were at stake.

Mr. Schurz read a letter written by the Chief of Ordnance, describing, he said, the operations of the War Depart-ment in making sales of arms at that pe-riod. The letter stated that bids had been 42d CONGRESS.

WASHINGTON, February 20. HOUSE.

On motion of Mr. FINKELNBURG, a bill was passed removing the political disa-bilities of Edward White, of St. Louis. The consideration of the bill reported devote a very few remarks to one thing said by that Benator. With an air of triumpa he held up a pamphlet purporting to contain one of my speeches, saying that it was circulated by the Democratic party in New Hampshire, and was producing a greater effect than any other document. I have since inquired into that matter, and what do you think that pamphlet contains: "It contains speeches of the Senators trout Illiance." The consideration of the bill reported by Mr. WHEARD-regulating-the employ-ment of committee clerks, was resumed. Mr. Wood criticised the Civil Service Committee for not being able to report a neasure of greater importance. He asked why was there so much distrust in public why was there so much district in points servants? The denoralization which existed in public life had not extended to private lile. The President had the responsibility of selecting good men for office, which he should not shirk by casting it on Congress. and they are speeches denouncing the corruption prevailing in the Custom House in New York. If such things work against the success of the administration party, then the fault does not lie with those who denounced the corruption. It is those who by covering up every abuse ever so glaring, and detending every violation of the law ever so scandalous, who brought the commonwealth to the pass

t on Congress.

Mr. Kerropposed the bill. He thought it should be modified so as to make it the regulation of the House. If the bill was passed it should include the customs and internal revenue collectors.

Mr. Holman supported the measure.

He said, a war with Great Reitsin would be a more circumstance. Britain would be a mere circumstance ompared with the late civil war: that land invasion was an absurdity, and that in a maritime war we should take a dozen English vessels while they could not find one of ours. He critized the composition of the American Commission at Geneva, referring specially to Bancroft Davis as a

Mr. Schurz then addressed the Senate. Mr. Schurz then addressed the Senate. He saffit that the weakness of the cause is apt to disclose itself by the nature of the arguments in its support. When we hear a case advocated by insinuations and innundoes with regard to the motives of those who have taken the other side we are very apt to suppose that there must be something wrong. Nobody who like listened to the speeches of the Senators from Indiana and New York (Morron and Conkling) would deny that the general rule applies to the present matter. The Senator from Indiana (Morron) tried to convince the Senate that there could be an agent of the French government, as further evidence that there did exist just ground for suspicion and therefore for investigation.
